Measuring Magnetic Fields. Meters measuring magnetic fields strength analyze the flux (changing field properties) of the magnetic field. A meter in motion will not measure this accurately, because measurements will be artificially elevated as you move through a magnetic field.

I have been a cynic towards people who worry about smart meters for a couple years, even was an early adopter nearly 5 years ago. The last year I have been experiencing a chronic sore throat that my doctors can't explain, my kids are developing learning disabilities, among other strange health issues.

In general, the relation between the EMF in a wire loop encircling a surface Σ , and the electric field E in the wire is given by $\oint \vec{E} \cdot d\vec{l} = \dots$ where $d\vec{l}$ is an element of contour of the surface Σ , combining this with the definition of flux $\Phi = \int \vec{E} \cdot d\vec{A}$, we can write the integral form of the Maxwell's Faraday equation $\oint \vec{E} \cdot d\vec{l} = -\dot{\Phi}$ $\hat{a} \dots = \hat{a}^{\wedge} \hat{a}^{\wedge} \ll \hat{a} \dots$ It is one of the four Maxwell's equations ...

A magnetometer or magnetic sensor is an instrument that measures magnetism either the magnetization of a magnetic material like a ferromagnet, or the direction, strength, or relative change of a magnetic field at a particular location. A compass is a simple type of magnetometer, one that measures the direction of an ambient magnetic field.. The first magnetometer capable of measuring the ...

The magnetic moment of a magnet is a quantity that determines the force that the magnet can exert on electric currents and the torque that a magnetic field will exert on it. A loop of electric current, a bar magnet, an electron, a molecule, and a planet all have magnetic moments.. Both the magnetic moment and magnetic field may be considered to be vectors having a magnitude and direction.
