The industrial nitriding process has been advanced for many years. Today, the main process parameters used to provide the required operating characteristics of articles are the composition and the preliminary treatment of the steel, the temperature and duration of the nitriding, and the degree of dissociation of ammonia.

combining nitriding and induction hardening specimens was much higher than that of substrate and nitride specimens [8]. The heat treatment process such as nitriding and induction hardening has selected then experimentally conducted few mechanical tests. The result shows fatigue strength of heat treatment had increased [9].
